Print less — five worksheet formats

Before you print, ask: will students write on the sheet itself? If not, pick a format from the table.

Format	Copies, class of 40	Before the lesson	In the lesson
1. Projected task with mini whiteboards	None	One question per slide in large type; read it from the back row	10 minutes: question, boards up, what you noticed
2. One sheet per group, with roles	10	Four roles at the top: reader, writer, checker, speaker	15 minutes, then one individual question in the notebook
3. Stations, one copy each	8 cards	Four independent tasks, self-standing instructions, clear sleeves	31 minutes: 7 per task, 1 per move
4. A link or QR code on a shared device	None	Test the link on a school device	15 minutes: one student holds the device, the others solve
5. A routine on the board	None	Three questions on the board before the lesson	5 minutes: question number and answer only

Print one per student when:

- ☐ The practice needs writing room: a diagram, a grid, a table or a long text.
- ☐ It is homework and you do not know whether every student has a device and internet.
- ☐ It is a test that counts.
- ☐ A student struggles to read the screen from their seat — a copy for them alone.
